NOTES

MARIA [KELLY]

It's hard work being the center of attention for a whole school, but also rewarding to see the looks of admiration and jealousy as you move through the corridors. Still, it is nice to have someplace where you can be yourself completely; like the tree house in your garden, where you and your sister and some of your friends hang out from time to time. But things have gotten complicated lately – your boyfriend Fredrik: tall handsome, and popular – keeps going on about how much he loves you, and that he wants to be with you forever. Neither he nor anyone else knows that you feel the same thing, but for another person.

NOTES

TIM [TIMMY]

They say a rat doesn't have any human feelings. But your pet rat sometimes seems to be the only one in the world who really understands you. During the weeks when your mom drinks, school and all its meaningless relationships and hierarchies just goes by in a haze. The bullies have tried to get at you by calling you Rat Boy, but you take it as a compliment. Rats don't lie and cheat and betray each other. Sometimes you want to get away from it all. But then there is Maria; the most wonderful person in the world. When it is bad at home, you stay at Fredrik's house – your childhood friend, and Maria's boyfriend – and you see the two of them cuddle and giggle. She doesn't even know that you exist.

NOTES

FREDRIK

[CHAD]

Sometimes it feels like your love is a joke to Maria, as if she is only pretending to love you back. But it doesn't matter, whatever happens you will make her see that the two of you are meant to be together. And it is nice to hang out with her and Tim, and her friend Linda, and Maria's younger sister Isabella. But you wish there was a little more time for the two of you to be alone. You hardly get to see her at all, and now the coach is nagging at you to train more. People keep saying you are the golden boy in school: the star of the school team, rich parents and the most popular girl at your side. Then how come life feels really hard? On top of that you have started to think that your dad is having an affair with another woman, and mom doesn't have a clue.

NOTES

ISABELLA [PATRICIA]

Maria's little sister, they keep saying. As if you are not your own person. And yet it is nice to be Maria's sister – everybody smiles at you and wants to be your friend. And it feels exciting to know that they can't imagine who you really are – all the secrets you have. Not that you have many, but you could have. Though there is that one thing you'd rather not let anyone else know – you can't seem to stop stealing things. It is as if small items jump into your pockets wherever you go. And you feel high from the thought of getting away with it. But Maria's friend Linda saw you do it once. You bet she will tell Maria lies about you, like saying that you are a thief. But you will outsmart her and make her like you. And at the same time perhaps you can get rid of Maria's stupid boyfriend.

NOTES

LINDA [ERIN]

The counselor at school told you that it is normal for parents to start acting strange when one of their kids dies. And you get that, but how long will it last? In your house there are only two sounds to be heard: the scratching from your pencil on the paper when you do your homework, and the barks from your dog Max. It feels like living in a tomb.

Whenever Maria calls you to ask you to come over to her tree house, which you helped her build when you were small, it feels like she is saving you from drowning. You can't stop yourself from staring at her boyfriend, Fredrik. Maybe one day, if you study really hard and become successful, and move away to another place, you can have a boyfriend like him: kind and safe and beautiful. But you wish he wouldn't bring his friend Tim to the tree house – what a creep!
